

An explosion of innovation in business was fuelled by the following except.
both A and B

This new economy began with business-to-consumer retailing, commonly called e-tailing _____ teams form and work together long enough to accomplish the task then disband, perhaps to form another team.

Task-oriented

Strategic alliances built around an organization's core competencies are becoming known as the _____ extended enterprises

Managing talent has become more important to corporate success than _____ managing finances

The Internet, which allows much closer to one-to-one contact between customer and seller, is _____ demand-pull

Hierarchies require a _____ of command where lines of responsibility do not cross and approval to proceed on major initiatives is granted from above.
vertical chain

An _____ is a web of relationships surrounding one or few companies.
ecosystem

_____ is occurring across industries as companies aim for this goal.
Merger Mania

The following are the three main operating arenas where Internet allows companies to work globally except _____ Africa