

Radiology and metrology psychologist

[PAD122] Who among these scholars was his work associated with motion study
Fredrick Winslow Taylor

[PAD122] The processes of organizational analysis to determine whether there are deficiencies of skills, reconciliation of present and future needs through scientific forecasting of the labour market supply and demand matrix are known as Manpower planning

[PAD122] One of these options serves as goals of psychology except Social and engineering behaviour

[PAD122] In which year was industrial psychology began as an academic discipline with the pioneering work of Musterberg.
1913

[PAD122] The study of industrial psychology focuses on one of these options except Individual and environment

[PAD122] Among these options are reasons organizations always need people for employment except Employment vacancies are scares

[PAD122] One of these options best explain external sources of recruitment into an organization except Recommendations of present employees

[PAD122] Industrial psychology as a sub-field of psychology was famously associated to one of these scholars
Hugo Munsterberg, Fredrick Taylor, Eton Mayo and Abraham Maslow

[PAD122] The process of determining the core activities engaged in by workers, i.e the duties, tasks, responsibilities, working conditions and hazards and assessment of human requirements of all jobs including the knowledge, skills, aptitudes, attitudinal dispositions, experience and other human attributes required to succeed on the job positions delineated in each of the departments and units of organization are known as
Job analysis

Whatsapp: 08089722160 or click here for TMA assistance

Practice E-exams & Chat with course mates on noungeeks.net