arguments

_____ enables a program to invoke subclass methods that are not in the superclass.
Downcasting

A _____ method is a method that calls itself.
recursive

A variable declared as _____ cannot be modified after they are initialised.

Select one:
final

Which type of method does not provide implementations for its action?
void methods

_____ are used for assigning common functionality to possible unrelated classes.
Interfaces

The process of intentionally converting an argument's value to the type that the method expects to receive in its corresponding parameter is called argument _____.
Promotion

Which types of classes cannot be used for object instantiation?
Abstract classes

Which option is an object that cannot be declared as abstract?
constructor

Method _____ is the process through which methods of the name are declared in the same class.
overloading