10.00/10.00.

The periodic copying of attributes in case primary disks or other equipment fails is called _____ *backup

When data is repeated between database servers so that the information remains consistent throughout the database system is referred to as_____ *replication

SQL simply means _____ *Structured Query Language

The following are examples of Dbms except_____.
Statistical analysis software

The process of limitation to who can have access to attributes or groups of attributes in DBMS is called _____ security

The _____ database management system organises data in tabular files.
relational

_____ enables the DBMS provide tools to monitor performance and allows a human expert to make the adjustments after reviewing the statistics collected.
Automated optimisation _____ database management system stores data in a tree-like structure.

hierarchical

____ is the process of requesting attribute information from various perspectives and combinations of factors.
Querying

___ is a set of software programs that controls the organisation, storage, management, and retrieval of data in a database

Database Management System