

The weights of pupils in the primary school constitute a _____ Variable

Entity may be person, place, and things on which we make _____ observation

_____ is used by business in market research to determine the acceptability of a product that will be demanded at various prices by a given population in a geographical area.
Statistics

Surveys, interview, observation, questionnaire and experiments are the various methods of collecting _____ data primary

The largest number of entities in a study is called _____ Population

Variable is a characteristic that assumes different ----- for different entities.
Values

Variables which take specific values are referred to as _____ Discrete

A variable that can assume both decimal and non-decimal values is called _____ variable Continous

_____ is the part of the population that is selected for study.
Sample

For the conduct and analyses of biological, physical, medical and social researches, we use _____ extensively.
Statistics

Whatsapp: 08089722160 or click here for TMA assistance

Practice E-exams & Chat with course mates on noungeeks.net